It identifies the business quickly. A logo is part of all marketing including business cards, websites, ads, email signatures, social media platforms and business correspondence. Research Do your research to see what your competition is doing and if their logos are effective. Search online to see how successful businesses have marketed the services through the use of powerful logos. Through the process, you'll likely find inspiration to begin defining your best logo and how it should reflect your brand. Type There are many types of logos. You might prefer a picture, monogram, wordmark or an emblem for your logo design. A combination logo using one or more of these types is also an option. This can be a subjective decision based on your own preference or you could ask other business professionals their opinion and advice as a guide. Color, Shape and Font The next step in creating your logo is choose the design's color, shape and font. Research indicates that color is the first thing that someone notices. The shape is important as you want to ensure it will fit on various types of marketing materials. The font can evoke professionalism or creativity depending on what suits your business best. The font will be incorporated in other marketing and advertising efforts to be consistent. Enlist Help When it comes to putting it all together, you might want to enlist the help of a graphic designer or logo design business. This will add expenses but will offer professional services. If you trust your own abilities and want to save money, there are many online programs to assist with creating your own logo. Trial Give the newly-created logo a trial period before printing marketing materials using it. Place it on social media sites, your websites and email signatures since that won't incur expenses. Ask friends and business professionals what they think of it. After a test period, tweak the logo for any needed changes. If it's good to-go as is, move forward with your brand and marketing with confidence. The Spice Depot The Spice Depot Ashiana Spice Spice Page 2 The Spice Depot The Spice Depot Ashiana Spice Spice When it comes to branding your small business, the logo is probably the most important thing to consider. You have several choices, from making your own to hiring a professional graphic designer. Here are some must-know tips to consider before you get started on finalizing your logo. Professional Logos Can Boost Your Business Unless you are very artistically talented or trained in graphic design, it's hard to pull off a professional-looking logo on your own. A professional logo speaks volumes and can make a big difference between your business having a legitimate or amateur look. You don't have to spend big bucks to get the logo you want, so you can also consider it a good investment. Consider Your Business Core Values A logo should represent your small business accurately. So, before you approach a logo designer, take the time to consider what your business' core values are. This information will help the designer create a better logo as certain colors and symbolism can represent your needs. For example, an eco-friendly business may require nature-inspired colors like green while a tech business may require something sleek. Budget-friendly Logo Options Not all small businesses have a big budget. Luckily, there are many different budget-friendly logo options to consider. There are sites that have numerous freelance graphic designers that are willing to craft you a custom logo for as little as $10. Many designers will even give you a couple of options from which to choose. For the best results, know what you want your logo to represent before contacting a designer. Mid-range Logo Options Maybe you want to spend a decent amount of money on a logo but still want to stay within a reasonable budget. Unlike some sites that attract a large pool of designers, you can search a website that offers incentives to designers with prizes. Designers can submit their ideas for your logo, and you choose the one you like best. These options usually range from less than $100 to more than $200. Professional Logo Options Hiring a professional graphic designer is likely your best bet if you have a booming small business, or an incredible idea that you know can take off. Designers' fees vary widely between several hundred dollars to even several thousand dollars. However, unlike all the other options, you are going to have someone take much more time and care to create your logo if you hire someone with credentials. He or she can help you bring your ideas to life and help you generate a logo design that you can be proud of for years to come. Plus, if he or she does a great job, you can also hire that designer to do other graphics work like packaging and web design. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET Create your own business logo that's memorable, enduring and appropriate to your company's message by following the design advice below. Getting Started When you're working on your company logo creation, it's essential to create an eye-catching graphic that's easy to understand without a lot of thought. A successful design balances originality and visual appeal with common sense and effective delivery of the message. Typography, web design and color theory are all important factors to consider when developing your business logo design. You'll also want to familiarize yourself with design software including Photoshop, InDesign and Illustrator. You should be skilled in Adobe Creative Suite to avoid frustration and to ensure that your finished product looks professional and usable in every placement your marketing plan requires. Brainstorm for Success Inspiration can come from anywhere. Observe your environment and keep track of what turns your head and makes you feel strong emotions. Read up on trends in the design world at creative sites like Dribbble, Logo Gaia or Deviant Art. Set up a dedicated meeting to get together with other people in your company and throw around concepts. If you're working solo, schedule a specific time to focus on writing down clever ideas and doodling what moves you. When you're ready to create your company logo, you can watch online tutorials that guide you through the steps you'll need to follow. Know Your Audience Since the main objective of your business logo is to build your brand, it's important to understand your audience. The logo is a required piece in your company's visual identity and should be consistent across all channels; make sure you're absolutely clear on the message you want to send because it will appear everywhere. It may be helpful to write a list of dos and don'ts to give yourself guidelines. An effective design should be versatile enough to apply to a range of placements, including logo labels, signs, website banners and brochures. Create Your Company Logo Critical thinking, methodical planning and creativity are all important parts of the creative process that contribute to creating a logo that will make your brand stand out in the market. Use a logo template found online for a basic outline that will give you an idea of proportion and structure. Or just start sketching ideas from your brainstorming session. Find a Professional If you're short on time and think you'd like to buy logos instead, try a local or online professional. Some sites are global creative platforms that give access to find skilled designers who can help you with branding. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET
